Success makes us stronger. It can also make us weaker.

THINKING NOTE 01

Success itself is not dangerous. The danger is learning the wrong lesson about why you succeeded.
SUCCESS CAN BECOME A TRAP

Success makes it easy to assume you were right

THINKING NOTE 02

Even if it was only luck, getting a result can make you imagine you won through your own judgment.
Then, next time, you increase the stakes. Underestimate risk. Cling to the same method.
A good outcome ≠ a correct decision.

In investing and management, the greatest enemy is past success

THINKING NOTE 03

Investing: continuing a method that worked once even after market conditions change.
Management: being unable to abandon past main products, organizations or business models.
The stronger the experience of success, the easier it is to dismiss change as an “exception.”
Yesterday’s right answer may not be tomorrow’s.

Reflect especially when you succeed

THINKING NOTE 04

Instead of only asking whether you won or lost, ask: “If I made that decision again, would the expected value still be positive?”
Was it skill? A favorable environment? Chance?
Failure encourages correction. Success can justify even mistaken methods.
See why success happened, rather than just trying to reproduce it.
